BERN, Switzerland — Scientists are on the verge of the most dramatic breakthrough in the history of genetic science: They're going to clone the Apostle Peter — Jesus' closest friend and most trusted disciple!

When the project is completed, scientists and theologians are hoping they will have an exact duplicate of the man who was at Christ's right hand throughout His ministry.

And what's more important, could the clone have some of Peter's memories intact?

The clone will be created from DNA taken from the late disciple's tomb.

Waitress

By ANN VICTORIA / Weekly World News

NEW ORLEANS — In the first-ever lawsuit of its kind, a waitress is suing the restaurant that employs her, asking for $1 million — because she doesn't like the cheap perfume a co-worker wears!

There have been cases in which customers have prevented employees from wearing certain perfumes because of allergies.

But this case is very different.

"I'm not allergic to the perfume and I don't claim to be," says Dorris Ambelon, who will bring the lawsuit before a Louisiana civil court in late March. "I simply feel ashamed to have to work in a restaurant where the air smells like a French house of ill-repute.

"I'm a respectable woman who lives a moral life. When customers come into the restaurant and smell that tawdry scent, they make assumptions about the place. And worse, they make assumptions about me and the other waitresses here."

"I've asked her to stop

Pete who wears the offending scent. But she says she'll be asking the court to award her $500,000 for pain and suffering and another $500,000 in punitive damages.

As bizarre as the idea sounds, some legal experts believe Miss Ambelon has a good chance of winning.

"I'm sure the defendant's attorney will say his client has the right to wear any fragrance she likes," says one New Orleans civil lawyer.

"But if Miss Ambelon's attorney can successfully argue preserved at St. Peter's Church in Rome — the church built over the site where Peter was crucified, somewhere around 65 A.D.

Scientists plan to place the DNA inside a human egg and put the egg inside a healthy woman's womb. The woman has been selected but her identity is being withheld from the public.

"If we can do this — and I have no doubt that it can be done — we could soon know more about the Savior than could ever have been imagined before," said noted genetic scientist Dr. Jann Reinhardt, who will oversee the cloning.

"We're not just creating a copy of the martyred saint. The clone will, in the most literal sense, be Peter. And through hypnosis, we hope to spark deep-seated memories."

Though scientists are brimming with excitement about the cloning, Christian leaders are split in their reaction. The Pope is said to be outraged. And most Protestant leaders are demanding a halt to the project, calling it "an abomination before God."

But other theologians are behind it 100 percent.

"The prospect is chilling," said Reverend Marcel Abernessy of the First Methodist Church of Paris. "It's time to set aside minor questions of ethics and see the big picture.

"Anything that will give us a greater, more complete knowledge of Christ has got to be a good thing."

ZOO BOY, 5, MAULED TO DEATH BY JAGUAR

Brave dad fights to save him

DOUE-a-FONTAINE, France — A 5-year-old boy was crushed to death and his brave dad seriously mauled by the massive jaws of a runaway jaguar during a family visit to a wildlife park.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Weekly World News

Tiny Gregoire Lucazeau was attacked by one of two powerful jaguars that tunneled out of their enclosure and burst through a fence at the park in central France, 180 miles from Paris.

"The animal pounced on the boy, locked its jaws around his head and neck and shook him like a rag doll," said a stunned bystander. "It happened so fast. It was a horrible thing to watch."

Heroic dad Christophe Lucazeau rushed in his aid as terrified visitors fled in fear shelter from the marauding beasts.

"The jaguar dropped the boy's body and was mauling his father when a police sharpshooter killed the animal with one shot, saving the life of the father," said a zoo official.

Though bleeding from his bout with the jaguar, the desperate dad rushed to his son's side, but it was too late. The youngster was dead.

Meanwhile, park attendants chased and captured the other big cat, which was later destroyed.

Little Gregoire, his two brothers, two sisters and three friends were running ahead of their parents. They didn't know the jaguars were lying in wait a few feet away, ready to pounce on the first person who walked by.

Officials have launched an investigation into security at the park, which attracts 220,000 visitors a year.

"We want to find out why the animals were able to escape their compound and take precautions to see that such an accident never happens again," said the park official.

FEMALE GUARD RAPED BY INMATE IN HIS CELL!

ABILENE, Texas — A female prison guard was making a bed check when an inmate pulled her into his cell, raped her and held her hostage with a makeshift knife to her throat for two hours.

The Robertson Prison convict was identified as Jesse Trevino Cortez, 22, a brutal rapist serving 30 years to life.

"We don't know how he was able to unlock his cell door. It was supposed to be locked," District Attorney Gary Brown said. "But we're investigating and we hope to get a grand jury indictment against him for aggravated sexual assault."

The unidentified guard was conducting a routine 5:40 a.m. bed check in the cell block when she was overpowered by the inmate wielding an 8-inch piece of sharpened metal.

HOW TO TELL A WIFE-BEATER — BEFORE YOU MARRY THE JERK!

AUTHOR and psychologist Dr. Laura Schlessinger reveals the tell-tale signs of a potential wife-beater.

By ALICE FOSTER
Weekly World News

Ladies, you can beat a wife-abuser to the punch and avoid serious injury — by dumping him long before he ever lays a hand on you!

Men who become wife-beaters have definite tell-tale personality traits, experts say.

"By learning to identify an abusive personality type, a woman can spot a potential wife-beater early on in a relationship — sometimes even on the first or second date," said New York City psychologist Dr. Laura Schlessinger, author of the upcoming book Victims No More. "She can get rid of him before he ruins her life."

Here, from Dr. Schlessinger, are eight signs that your "dream date" is an abuser:

There are 8 tell-tale signs, says psychologist

☞ VIOLENT TOWARD OTHERS — If your sweetheart is quick to resort to violence — especially against those weaker and smaller than himself — watch out. "If your man threatens to 'beat the crap' out of an elderly motorist over a minor traffic dispute, that's a red flag," says the expert.

☞ CONTROLLING — Wife-beaters need to feel in control of the household at all times — if not, they freak out. If your beau is the type who insists on making every decision — even picking out your clothing — expect him to violently "lose it" the first time you assert yourself.

☞ MEAN DRUNK — Not every heavy drinker abuses others. Some can become cheerful or simply pass out when they drink. But if alcohol brings out the hidden nasty side of your "Mr. Perfect," figure on going 15 rounds with him sometime in the future.

☞ TEMPER TANTRUMS — If your guy flies off the handle over little things — and especially if he tends to take out his frustration on those around him — he's a walking time bomb.

☞ ALWAYS BLAMES OTHERS — When things go wrong, whose fault is it? If he never takes responsibility, beware. "In the future, when he's slapping you around, he'll say that it's your 'smart mouth' that started the fight," said Dr. Schlessinger.

☞ POSSESSIVE — Don't be fooled into thinking extreme jealousy is proof of true love. If your man treats you like his personal property instead of a person, he's a menace. "A male feels he can do whatever he likes with his own property," says the expert.

☞ VERBALLY ABUSIVE — Does he make mean remarks? Many wife-abusers soften up their victims with vicious tirades for months or years before they finally let their fists do the talking.

☞ HIS DAD BEAT MOM — Quiz him about this as soon as you know him well enough. Says the expert: "Remember, wife-beating is a learned behavior."

Millennium Bug will make sex toys go haywire!

Ladies, at 12:00 on Jan. 1, 2000, make absolutely sure you're not using a musical aid — because the device may go completely haywire, technical experts warn. Many modern-day vibrators — especially those with variable-speed controls — contain microchips, which mean that they could go out of control along with computers and other high-tech devices when the impending Millennium Bug computer crisis kicks in.

Why is it that "slim chance" and "fat chance" mean the same thing?

A woman really can drive a man to drink

... says new report

Certain types of women can drive a man to drink — and certain types of men can turn a woman to booze, a new report reveals.

"There are four common types of wives of the alcohol-dependent male," said Charles Vetter, director of a London-based organization conducting research into alcoholism and its treatment.

By JUNE SAWYER
Weekly World News

CONTRIBUTOR — She marries a man she regards (perhaps unconsciously) as inadequate or inferior to her. A kinder view might be that she has deep-seated needs to care for, nurse and control another person as she would a child.

Her drinking mate finds that he can depend upon his controller to pay the bills, do his laundry, have dinner ready regardless of how late it is, see to the children and make excuses to his employer when he is too long over to go to work.

PERSECUTOR — Her relationship to her husband resembles that of a boa constrictor to a rabbit, although the rabbit does relief by going out and getting drunk.

The persecutor is a great fault-finder. Everything her husband does is wrong.

MARTYR — "Suffering Susan" is a wife whose needs to be miserable are gratified by her marriage to an alcohol-dependent husband. Being hurt, degraded and intimidated by him suits her.

WAVERER — She is fearful and insecure. She needs to believe that her husband cannot get along without her. If his drinking gets too much out of control, she can shift into the role of persecutor.

There are at least three categories of husbands who can drive their wives to drink.

DOMINANT — He looks for a woman he can order around. Wives married to this type of husband are conditioned to obedience and dare to assert themselves only after they have reinforced their personalities by drinking.

DOMINATED — He is under the influence of his alcohol-dependent wife — who has been driven to drink by his always correct, rigidly predictable attitudes and actions.

SLAVER — He treats his wife as he does a car. He expects daily, reliable service from her — as a maid, child minder, cook, sex object and all-around slave.

When she breaks down and starts drinking excessively, he will bring her in for repairs. If she breaks down too often, he'll trade her in for a newer model.

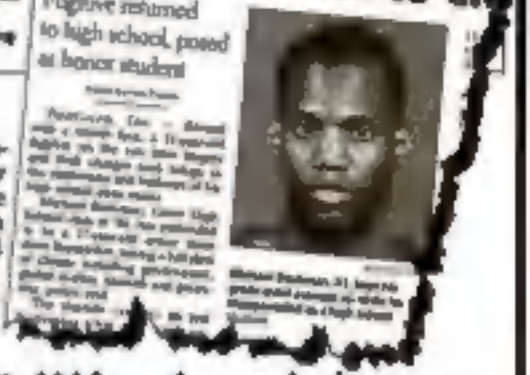
THE FUGITIVE!

31-year-old convict masquerades as high school senior — & turns into a brilliant honor student!

NEWSPAPERS nationwide are reporting this story.



By JACK ALEXANDER
Weekly World News

PORTLAND, Ore. — Popular high school senior Dean Deangelo sang in the a cappella choir, carried a full slate of classes and had a lofty 3.5 grade average.

But this outgoing honor student with a baby face wasn't what he seemed to be. He was, in fact, a 31-year-old fugitive who masqueraded as a 17-year-old student at his alma mater for three months before cops caught up with him.

His amazing charade ended when police got an anonymous tip that Deangelo was actually Michael Backman, a fugitive wanted on theft, forgery and parole violation charges in Oregon, Washington and California.

Police Sgt. Mike Hefley interrupted cheer practice to take Backman into custody.

"I introduced myself and said I wanted him to help in identifying someone," Sgt. Hefley said. "I opened up the 1998 Grant High School yearbook and pointed to a senior class picture of him.

"His reaction was one of shock. He knew the game was over."

Backman, using the name Deangelo, showed up at Grant High in September, accompanied by a woman posing as his legal guardian. They had convincing documents indicating he was transferring from Beverly Hills (Calif.) High School.

He quickly blended in with his short-cropped hair and boyish looks. He was on the honor roll with a straight-A grade average and sang a solo during the school's Christmas program.

By all accounts, Backman was a popular student who made great grades without struggling.

"He was the kind of guy who handed in his reports two weeks early," said a classmate.

No one had the faintest idea Backman was a "con man" who had spent most of the last 10 years in prison, Sgt. Hefley said.

"But we wondered where he got his money and how he could afford the '98 Camaro he drove," said a classmate.

Backman is being held in nearby Beaverton on a forgery charge. Police still haven't located the woman who accompanied Backman when he enrolled in the school.

He hid from the cops in classrooms where 'Mr. Holland's Opus' was filmed!

Scientists reveal: The sky is falling!

LONDON — The sky is falling — really!

Scientists at the British Antarctic Survey say Earth's upper atmosphere is shrinking. It is also cooling. The outer layer of it was 60 years ago. And each year, cooler waves that are formed off the lower atmospheric layer are taking less time to echo back.

Researchers at the French Astronomical Institute in Paris say the ozone layer is dropping to increasing at a dramatic rate.

The experts say we could literally be walking through clouds of acid-laced by 2010.

People living in Denver and other Rocky Mountain areas will need to keep an eye on the kids in their homes, or worse, find themselves unable to survive at their altitude.

Top Psychics Reveal:

PREDICTIONS FROM

COPYRIGHT © 1999 WEEKLY WORLD NEWS

LANTANA, Fla. — Noted psychics worldwide are reporting something very disturbing: Over the past five years, there has been a dramatic increase in the number of departed souls trying to warn the living to prepare for the end of the world!

WEEKLY WORLD NEWS EXCLUSIVE

By ANN VICTORIA

This upsetting news has come to light as a result of a recent poll in which Weekly World News called upon 20 of the world's top mediums — psychics who specialize in contacting the spirits of the dead.

The NEWS asked these gifted men and women — some of the most accurate and respected in their field — a two-part question: "In your contacts with the spirit world, are there any themes or subjects that come up regularly, and if so, what are they?"

The answer stunned us. An amazing 17 of the 20 mediums said yes. And even more incredibly, all 17 noted the same theme: The world as we know it is very close to ending.

A typical response comes from French medium Claire Sentenac. The acclaimed psychic, who speaks to at least 11 departed spirits every day, says nearly all of them tell her there is nothing to fear "on the other side" — but that we, the living, must be prepared for death.

"They want us to be ready for the end," Miss Sentenac told us by phone from Paris. "They're telling us there are four specific things we should do here on Earth while there is still time.

"Doing these four things will make it easier for us to 'cross over' to the spirit world and they will also make it easier for us to remain at peace once we're there."

She says we should:

1. Pray regularly
2. Love one another
3. Exercise our minds every day
4. Eat no meat. Yes, there seems to be a definite connection between nutrition and spirituality.

Fifteen of the other mediums mention the danger that the world will end soon — and go on to give specific details about how the spirits say the end will come and what will lead up to it.

Revered medium Dr. James Raschland, of Santa Fe, N.M., says that certain things will happen just before the end.

"Some of the specifics are vague," he says. "But many are crystal clear."

According to Dr Raschland:

- There will be a series of violent earthquakes, occurring over 11 consecutive days. The quakes will occur in Tokyo, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Mexico City and seven other cities that the spirits do not designate.
- After this 11-day seismic upheaval, a major fire will break out somewhere in Kansas or Missouri, in a city untouched by the quakes. The blaze will sweep outward in a wide circle, consuming thousands of acres. Millions will die. The fire will eventually be extinguished, but the world will end a month later.
- The spirits also say that before the end, a strange fad will sweep the Earth. Millions of young people will begin having sex in public. This vile practice will be the "in" thing to do. Teens and young adults will do it to shock older people.
- Less than three months before the Earth's destruction, the world will be plagued by a ravenous life-form — a hideous species of insect that devours not only human and animal life, but vegetable and mineral material as well. Thousands will die in America but the majority of victims — millions — will die in Asia and Africa.
- A strange and deadly virus will strike the United States and Canada.

Seers everywhere receiving messages — from the Other

THE SPIRIT WORLD

SEEING THE END- French psychic Claire Boudreaux, left, Dr. Hamer Kingsland and Denmark's Ulla Knudsen have all been contacted by spirits of the dead and warned to prepare for the end of life as we know it its early symptoms will be a simple cough and a sore throat. But it will spread to the brain, causing victims to fly into homicidal and suicidal rages. People will torture and brutalize one another and thousands will be murdered, or die by their own hands.

● Strange signs will appear in the skies. Both the moon and sun will appear to break in half and hover eerily above us for days.

The stars will come so close to Earth that they will appear 60 times larger than they do now.

Very few of the mediums say the souls they speak with tell them how the end will come. Denmark's Ulla Knudsen is an exception.

Mrs. Knudsen tells the NEWS, "The spirits say the Earth will be ultimately destroyed in a war — a war which, oddly enough, does not involve major powers like the U.S., Russia or China.

"They say the war will be between two small Middle Eastern nations who will unleash the force of a monstrous weapon of destruction.

"They will realize too late that they do not know how to control the weapon and it will destroy Earth with a combination of fire and germ warfare."

Construction workers find covered wagon filled with gold!

BUILDING contractor Randy Bratter was clearing land when he hit pay dirt

Nugget-filled sacks date back to the 1850s, says California historian

By RANDY JEFFRIES Weekly World News

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A team of construction workers has made a $2½ million discovery in the Sierra Nevada foothills: A covered wagon from the 1850s filled with gold nuggets!

Housing contractor Randy Bratter and his crew were clearing land to build a home just east of Rancho Cordova when they struck something hard. The men used shovels to carefully clear away the dirt around it.

"I couldn't believe my eyes," said Bratter. "It was an actual covered wagon, just like you'd see in a cowboy movie. But this one was absolutely real. We were stunned."

And when Bratter and his three-man crew looked inside the wagon they made an incredible discovery. "Under the rotting canvas cover we found 46 burlap sacks," said Bratter. "Each bag held about 10 ounces of yellow rocks. Even before the geologists confirmed it, we knew they were gold nuggets."

Sacramento historian and Old West expert Dr. Michael Esterman examined the Conestoga wagon and says it dates from the early 1850s, the height of California's gold rush days.

"The wagon was found less than 20 miles from the site of Sutter's mill where James Marshall first discovered gold in 1848," said Dr. Esterman.

"Within a couple of years, thousands of prospectors had swarmed to the hills looking for gold. Some of them hit it big.

"But there were also droves of desperadoes preying on the lucky ones. This wagon was probably looted from one of the miners in the area, but the thief's luck ran out when he tried to bring the stolen gold to Sacramento.

HISTORIAN. Dr. Michael Esterman.

"The wagon was rotten all the way through," said Dr. Esterman. "And one of the wheels was broken. It would seem the thief was in such a hurry to get away that he left behind a fortune in gold!"

Bratter and his crew didn't find the gold until after they had finished their day's work and were ready to head home. "We were all dead tired, so we decided to wait until the next morning to see what was inside the wagon."

Geologists say the gold is about 99 percent pure. They estimate its worth at $2½ million. "Of course, we'll have to give our fair share to Uncle Sam for taxes," said Bratter of himself and his crew. "But, we'll all still wind up with more money than any of us thought we'd see in our lifetimes."

POLISH STUDENTS ARE TOPS AT CHEATING!

WARSAW, Poland — Students from elementary through college are exceptionally brilliant in one area of academic life: They've developed cheating into a fine art!

The practice of cribbing on tests is so widespread it's become expected. Parents condone it, teachers take it for granted and no one is too upset about it.

The techniques range from simple sheet sharing and answers written on the hand all the way up to miniature radio transmitting devices.

Cheating is so rampant that tests have become a sort of good-natured game in which teachers try to catch students in the act. But unlike schools in America, Polish schools rarely

EVERYONE HAS A GUARDIAN ANGEL

By DENNIS MICKS
Weekly World News

You really DO have a guardian angel — and you can use its powers to bring you love, happiness, health and wealth, a leading theologian says.

. . . and here's how you can make yours work for you!

Do you need to do a warm-up to contact your heavenly guardian and enlist its help — according to Dr. Carl Linder of the Institute of Christian Teachings in Stockholm, Sweden.

In today's stressful times, most people haven't taken the time to contact their guardian angels — but people can put those guardians back in charge of their lives just by calmly desiring and listening to their companions from above.

"We've given the heavenly hosts from the moment of birth and it is with us all our days," said Dr. Linder, author of two books on angels and their relationships with humans. "Yet most of us have forgotten it's there.

"It's like ignoring one of the most important resources we have. Angels can control what happens to us. But only we by the way we live can affect what others do to us. They can even help us see the future. The guardian angel's job is to protect and to encourage us in the face of all life's problems and challenges ... why not learn to take advantage of it?"

Dr. Linder published an impressive study involving hundreds of people and their contacts with guardian angels. His work indicates the most successful people are in regular communication with their angels and people who describe their lives as happy are also 50 percent more likely to have contacts with their angels.

"They don't always perceive these contacts as communications with an angel but that's what it is," Dr. Linder said. [illegible] and feelings [illegible] attempts [illegible] your guardian angel.

Want to change your life? Then write your own obituary!

"Sit down, look [illegible] over your life and write your own obituary. The epitaph that faces you can provide the jolt you need to live the life you want," says top psychiatrist, Dr. Hoy Menninger. "What have you accounted to? What have you become? What are you proud to say about yourself? The question is whether you are going to look at what you've written and exclaim, 'Oh, my God! This isn't what I want my life to add up to!'

"The point is that if you spend some time writing your obituary now — and it makes you think and act — the real one at the end of your life could be an epitaph you'll be proud of.

"Have you retreated to the standard middle-class value of measuring your success in terms of dollars? Will you be remembered only because you had three houses, two cars and a boat?" asks Dr. Menninger.

"We periodically see patients in here in their mid-40s suffering from acute depression. They need hospitalization because they've pursued the material things in life with a frenzy — only to find out, when they achieved them, that they didn't mean anything.

"It's surprising how many people feel helpless and act as if they were on a merry-go-round, unable to get off.

"They often express that they're caught up with work, the PTA, chauffeuring the kids to school. They never step outside themselves and say 'Look, Buster! Nobody forced you to join the PTA. Nobody forced you to work where you do — you chose to work there. Nobody forced you to have a family!

"You have far more choices to be the person you want to be than you might realize. That's why I suggest you write your own obituary. It may prompt you to make some significant changes in your life."

THE NIGHTMARE OF GALLSTONES

. . . find out if you are at risk!

Gallstones are a medical nightmare for a whopping 15 million Americans — including about 20 percent of the population over 40 — but changes in diet could spell relief for some sufferers.

By ELAINE ROBERTS
Weekly World News

A diet rich in high fiber foods and low in fatty and spicy foods may reduce or dissolve the often painful pebblelike deposits which are most often formed when cholesterol crystallizes in the gallbladder.

Here are some other vital facts about gallstones, a problem that has long baffled scientists and laymen alike:

● About one in every four women and one out of every eight men will develop gallstones by the time they reach 40.

● Fat people are twice as likely to develop stones as skinny people.

● Repeated crash dieting raises the risk of gallstones.

● The risk also jumps among women who use birth control pills, especially those who use them for many years.

● Americans and people in most other developed countries are the world's most frequent gallstone victims. The painful condition is rare in Japan and almost unknown in some African countries.

● For reasons still a mystery an incredible 70 percent of Arizona's Pima Indians over the age of 35 suffer from gallstones.

● There are about 21 million operations every year for the removal of gallstones, and in addition, nearly one-half million gallbladders are removed as doctors work over.

Doctors say that the people who have had their gallbladders surgically removed do not suffer any ill effects from the loss of the organ. Cows, horses, whales and elephants — don't have gallbladders at all.

The gallbladder, which is about three inches long, is attached to the liver.

It holds the digestive juice or bile that the liver produces to break down fatty foods. The trouble most often comes when cholesterol, which is also secreted by the liver, crystallizes in the gallbladder and forms stones that block the passages from that poor shaped organ.

While most stones rest harmlessly in the gallbladder, some of them slip out into the bile canals and cause severe pain that some sufferers say is more agonizing than childbirth.

Surgery remains the most frequent form of relief, but doctors are excited by the promise of the high-fiber diet, which may help prevent the formation of the gallstones in the first place.

Bizarre 'Zebra Disease' death toll hits 69!

By KEVIN CREID - Weekly World News

LAGASPI, Philippines — A deadly new virus causes black stripes to break out on the skin. Then inflicts a painful death that makes victims feel as though they are being burned alive!

And worse, the disease may soon become an epidemic that will sweep across America like wildfire.

Scientists call the disfiguring illness the Dahlsaurer Virus after French gynecologist Dr. Jean Luc Dahlsaurer who first studied it in depth. But locals refer to it as "the zebra [illegible]."

VICTIMS PRAY for death to come quickly and deliver them from the excruciating pain they are suffering.

was summoned from Paris by baffled Philippine health officials who had already quarantined 17 people with the disturbing symptoms in a small medical facility here.

These initial 17 patients have all since died — along with 52 others.

"The disease strikes only Caucasian or Asian adults," said Dr. Dahlsaurer. "The first symptoms are a cough and a mild-to-high fever. The fever subsides on the third day and small black discolorations appear on the shoulders and back.

"By the end of a week, the entire body is covered with jet-black stripes.

"But as horrific as these symptoms are, the worst is yet to come. After about 10 days, the stripes begin to burn. Victims say it feels as though someone is pressing a hot iron against them.

"After five or six nightmarish days of extreme pain, mercifully, death comes to relieve the agony."

So far all the cases have been confined to this small city.

New flurry of Virgin Mary sightings has experts puzzled

By RANDY JEFFRIES, Weekly World News

MEDJUGORJE, Bosnia — In recent years, there has been a dramatic increase in sightings of the Virgin Mary. And many theologians believe these visions herald the end of the world!

Ever since 1981, when The Blessed Virgin appeared here in this tiny Bosnian village, hundreds of thousands of people have been journeying here each year, hoping for a miracle in their lives.

Now Mary seems to be revealing herself to Christians everywhere.

During the last 1900s the Mother of Jesus has made her presence felt in almost every country in the world.

In some cases, people have seen her statues weep real tears of blood — and even heard her speak. In other incidents, her image has been seen in clouds, on doorways and on the walls of churches and homes.

And there are hundreds of people who "channel" Mary — that is, allow her spirit to inhabit their bodies and speak through them.

Three months ago, in Conyers, Ga., more than 100,000 believers gathered to hear an otherwise ordinary woman named Nancy Fowler channel messages from Mary.

In a recent interview a spokeswoman for Mrs. Fowler said, "This is happening all over the place. The Blessed Mother is on a mission to deliver the message that things are not going as they should go [in the world]."

French Bible scholar and Paul Thuan author Claude Tresmontant agrees.

"The New Testament warns that the physical manifestations of Mary is one of the signs that the end of the world is near.

"She is urging us to turn from our sinful ways and give our lives to her Son, Jesus.

"And we had better listen to her before God's terrible wrath is visited upon the Earth."

TEEN SWEETHEARTS HAVING SEX ON AIRPORT RUNWAY KILLED BY 757 JUMBO JET!

SYDNEY, Australia — Nigel Nicholas Miles, 19, and his airhead 18-year-old girlfriend Ginger Ellis tried to win a $10 bet by making love on an airport runway — and were crushed like bugs by an oncoming jumbo jet!

By JOE BERGER, Weekly World News

"I hate to be too graphic, but there wasn't much left of those poor kids — just a little hair and bone and a big grease spot," said airport security worker Murray Mitchell. "I'm sure they never felt a thing."

Sidney Police Detective Sergeant Phillip Dellington said the incompetent couple, 19 bucks, they wouldn't strip to the skin and get it on in the middle of an open airport runway.

"Me and the guys never dreamed they'd actually go out there and do it," said devastated Detective Dellington. "But they wouldn't let a bet like that go by."

Nigel and Ginger, who had been dating for almost a year, were drinking heavily at a local pub when the bet was made, police said.

Around 1 a.m., the drunken duo climbed a fence and ran across the runway, where they made passionate love — until a Boeing 757 extinguished their ardor forever.

"We were watching from the terminal with our binoculars and we saw them running out there," said Detective Dellington. "Suddenly we saw this big plane heading right at them, but they must have thought it was going to a different runway because they didn't even move.

"I was screaming and screaming, and finally I just turned away because I knew it was going to be awful."

Dellington said the pilot of the jet, which was arriving from Singapore, saw the amorous duo until it was too late to stop. But he said the jet's 287 unsuspecting passengers felt nothing but a slight bump when the plane plowed over the pair.

"I'm just glad the passengers didn't have to see what we saw," said Dellington. "It was pretty

By ELAINE ROBERTS / Weekly World News

If you want to come across as perfectly honest, never say "to be perfectly honest," warns a language expert — who reveals other phrases people commonly use and shouldn't.

Listeners become wary of what you're about to say when you use the phrase "to be perfectly honest," says language scholar Professor William Lutz.

"If a politician says it, I think most people in the audience are thinking, 'He's about to tell me a lie.' "

Here are other conversational no-nos, according to Prof. Lutz:

● NEEDLESS TO SAY — "If it's needless to say, then don't say it," he advises.

● AS YOU'RE WELL AWARE -- If listeners are already aware, then why say it?

And if they aren't, this phrase will just make them feel stupid, says Prof. Lutz, author of the book Doublespeak. From Revenue Enhancements To Terminal [illegible]

● YOU KNOW WHAT I MEAN? — If your listener doesn't know what you mean, he'll ask.

● I HEAR WHAT YOU ARE SAYING - "You appear to be agreeing without really agreeing," the professor said. "Later you may find that someone thinks you've said yes when you may not have really said yes."

Also to be avoided are statements with words ending in "ish," such as "I'll meet you around 10ish." It's better to give a specific time.

"These phrases can lead to imprecise communication in important situations," Prof. Lutz said.

453-lb. woman stuck in compact car for 8 hours!

SYDNEY, Australia — A 453-pound woman was rescued after eight hours of agony when she became entrapped in her compact rental car in a shopping mall parking lot — and nearly broiled to death in the 120-degree heat!

Police say the woman was rescued after another shopper heard her cries coming from inside the closed car and called emergency workers. She was freighted with heat stroke but is expected to recover.

My sicko boyfriend spiked my coffee with laxatives!

NANCY in Kansas

Dear Dotti: I knew that my boyfriend was a practical joker when I started dating him but nothing could have prepared me for the crazy shenanigans he pulls. Just last month he let the air out of the tires on my car and glued my driver's license to the mantel. He also put half a bottle of laxative in my coffee before we went to a party at my boss's house. I ended up spending most of the night on the john and I almost got fired because of it. I really do love him, Dotti, but sometimes I think he's going too far. What do you think I should do? — Nancy in Kansas

Dear Nancy: This guy sounds like a practical joker, all right — a practical jerk! Tell him that unless he stops playing these childish pranks, you're through with him. Period. Then, if you're still willing to spend one more minute with this juvenile, give him a hell of a lot stronger than he's Mom blew her nose on my new tablecloth!

Dear Dotti: My mother came to Sunday dinner at my house last week and her behavior was atrocious. I could go on and on about it, but suffice it to say she blasted the edge of my new linen tablecloth and blew her nose in it right in the middle of dinner. I was so stunned that I couldn't even speak. What would you have done if you were in a situation like that? — Rosalyn in South Dakota

ROSALYN in South Dakota

Dear Rosalyn: I'd've run out and bought my mother a new nose! Actually, I would have gotten up from the table, excused myself for a moment, gone to the kitchen and quietly told her that she had a piece of toilet paper hanging from her nostril. Then I would've left the room again and waited for her to fix herself up. If she refused to do so, I would've told her to get out of my house and never come back. Only then would I have felt that I had done all I could to preserve the dignity of my tablecloth.

You aren't pretty enough to be a hooker!

Dear Dotti: You are, without a doubt, the rudest, most insensitive person I've ever had the misfortune to read about. How can you tell that poor girl that she isn't pretty enough to be a hooker? Don't you realize that she's probably very sensitive about her appearance and that your cruel remark could cause her to have a nervous breakdown? I'm sure that she's not the only one who thinks you're a heartless bitch. I'm also sure that you're going to receive a lot of letters telling you what you can do with your advice. I'm not going to waste my time writing to tell you that. Instead, I'm going to write to tell you that you're a disgrace to the human race. I hope you choke on your own vomit. — Disgusted in Dallas

Dear Disgusted: Thanks for writing. I'm sorry you're so upset, but I'm afraid you misunderstood my response to Jennifer. I wasn't saying that she wasn't pretty enough to be a hooker. I was saying that she wasn't pretty enough for that hooker. Big difference. Hope this clears things up for you. Love, Dotti

Confidentials

Dear Happy Guy in Delaware: So what makes you so sure you're the father?

Dear Lois struck it DC: I hate to tell you this, pinhead, but Bill Clinton is married.

Dear suicidal in Alabama: That's what you get for having kids!

Dear Lucky in Nevada: I would say a lot about your situation, but I'll keep it short and sweet. The next time the Lord Lord hands out brains, take some!

Dear Hooked in Colorado: Oh, you play "run and hide" as a waterbed, poker? as a waterbed.

Dear Worried in Texas: I've heard of sex games but "air sex" is ridiculous!

Dear Cruel Lady in Indiana: Condoms might very well look like miniature hula hoops but they don't belong in a bathroom!

Dear Desperate Wife in New York: Most men dislike appearing fat cats as well and we can't do much about those either. Don't worry about it!

Dear Disappointed in Michigan for Lord's sake, Michigan, the girl's wearing a man ... the girl's wearing a man ... work boots!

I can't bear to smooch with my bad-breath beau!

Dear Dotti: My boyfriend is a great guy and he always treated me like a queen. But he absolutely adores garlic and sprinkles it on everything he eats. Needless to say, he has breath that would peel a camel. Whenever we kiss I want to throw up. How can I make him see the light? — Maria in Washington

Dear Maria: I'm afraid there's only one way to get him to stop eating garlic, and that's to tell him that you're sick and tired of his bad breath. Tell him that you love him very much, but that you're not going to put up with it any longer. Tell him that you're going to leave him if he doesn't stop eating garlic. Tell him that you're going to leave him if he doesn't stop eating garlic. Tell him that you're going to leave him if he doesn't stop eating garlic

Was I married to Ben Franklin in a past life?

Serena Sabak

Dear Serena: I am convinced I was married to Benjamin Franklin in a former life.

JOAN in Buchanan

Ever since I was a little girl I've been fascinated with him. I have always felt he was the greatest American statesman, and it always bothered me that he doesn't get more credit. Then about six years ago when I was 15, I started having a recurring dream that I was his wife. In the dream, Ben is outside flying his kite in a lightning storm and I'm in the house terribly troubled about him. I always wake up screaming and frightened. Please tell me about my former life with Benjamin Franklin. — Joan in Buchanan

Dear Joan: You lived a former life in the 1600s in Europe and were married to a man named Andrew Watrous. He died in 1654 and years later was reincarnated as Benjamin Franklin. You feel the strong bond to Ben Franklin because your souls are eternally linked. Even though you were never actually married to him.

Dear Serena: My puppy dog Lollie has been missing for four weeks and I'm afraid I'll never see her again. I've looked all over town, but I can't find her anywhere. You're my last hope, Serena. Please tell me where Lollie is. I'll be heartbroken if I don't get her back. — Penny in Yorkville

PENNY in Yorkville

Dear Penny: Your dog was taken by a man who works for a traveling carnival that visited your town last month. Unfortunately, the carnival is 250 miles away, but in two weeks it will be back. Go to the carnival and show the manager photos of you with Lollie. He'll make sure you get your dog back. But be ready for a surprise. Lollie will have puppies in a couple of weeks.

CURTIS in Virginia

Dear Serena: I spoke with someone on the Internet about a month ago who claimed to be you. I was a little suspicious, even though you (or whoever) gave me perfect advice on where to find a ring I had lost. Was it really you? — Disputed in Flatlands

Dear Disputed: Sorry, it wasn't me. I spend quite a bit of time on the Internet and love chatting with NEWS readers. I'll be answering questions on the Weekly World News Website at http://www.wwnews.com

Dear Serena: I have a dog-walking service and I've been walking Brad Pitt for three years and I think he is the No. 1 star in the world. My friends say I'm stupid for being so devoted to him, but I keep telling them they don't know many Spanish-speaking people, so maybe it might not be too bad. What do you think? — Elaine in Litchfield

ELAINE in Litchfield

Dear Elaine: Don't do it! If you do, he'll get the nickname Pato before he even makes it out of the first grade. And since your son will be fairly large, the unfortunate nickname will stick.

Dear Serena: My mother-in-law is driving me crazy. She's always criticizing my housekeeping and my cooking. She's also constantly telling me how much money my husband could have made if he had married someone else. I've asked her politely to stop, but she won't. What should I do? — Frustrated in Fairfield

Dear Frustrated: Tell her that you've had a long talk with your husband and he's decided to divorce her mother and marry you. That should shut her up.

Dear Serena: My husband got a big raise at work and didn't even tell me about it. I've heard a rumor that some of the other workers in her office got raises but whenever I ask her about it she just laughs and says she doesn't know anything about it. Then last weekend she bought herself a ton of new clothes and even ordered a new refrigerator. Where did she get all this money? Did she get a big raise she didn't tell me about? — Curtis in Virginia

Dear Curtis: She didn't get a raise — but she said some words that the company had given her more than a pay raise. Don't say anything to her about it — let her spend her money the way she wants. And don't be surprised when she buys you a special gift in about a week.

Dear Serena: I have been sending gifts and letters to Brad Pitt for three years and I think he is the No. 1 star in the world. My friends say I'm stupid for being so devoted to him, but I keep telling them they don't know many Spanish-speaking people, so maybe it might not be too bad. Carrie bases her findings on [illegible] experiences with the dead through mediums, persons from psychic who were pronounced dead but were later revived, and reports from others who had [illegible] of body experiences (OBEs).

In one case, a woman who had an OBE told Carrie she remembered looking her body and wondering what to do, when she met a couple who had previously died.

"The more both her mom and a [illegible] deceased husband, said Carrie. "When the client was asked how she got such a beautiful place, she described what she had made it with her mind — and proceeded to create even more beautiful scenery just by thinking about it.

"The next period of deceased do the same thing and was told to sim[illegible]ply visualize what she wanted. She did — and made a blue cave.

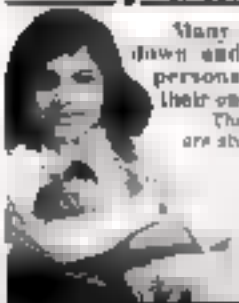
"But before she could make any more wonderful objects, her experiences began to end and she returned to her body and her life on Earth.

The person was experiencing a realm of the afterlife known as the "plane of thoughts," Carrie explained.

"The purpose is to get rid of all your earthly desires and attachments. If you can learn to create as you would anything at the flicker of a thought, you're apt to get bored."

When this happens, he said, you leave the afterlife and return to Earth in a new incarnation.

Kids pour out their true feelings to their pets — not Mom and Dad, says new study!



PETS are nonjudgmental — and that's [illegible]. They have to be loved

Many children will sit down and pour out their personal problems to their one dear friend — their cat or dog!

That's the word from [illegible] who are studying the unusual phenomenon.

"They trust the pet and they tell the pet things they wouldn't tell anyone else," said psychologist Dr. Barbara Levinson.

Psychologist Dr. Suzanne Mega[illegible]han was studying the relationship between the children and their pets and that kids "would sit down and reflect with the pets as [illegible] things of pets as [illegible] concern."

Most of the youngsters were [illegible] they deeper feelings because they were [illegible] the pets cared, she said.

"It was as if they knew that someone cares about [illegible] you are concerned that they will pay [illegible] things that you like. The animal would do things more clever or [illegible] or in some way make a response that made them feel that the pet did care."

The pet served as a source of unconditional love and acceptance, Dr. Levinson added.

[illegible] what you [illegible] you may be drunk or sober but he is still your friend. Animals learn to understand their owner's deepest problems."

Animals seem to have a natural empathy for humans, said Dr. Samuel Corson, who has used pets to help patients in adolescent psychiatry.

"They have a natural acceptance for the kind of feelings we have and don't have a natural self-centeredness that this is because they are nonjudgmental. They don't criticize. They love to be liked."

Millions buying prescription drugs over the Internet — without ever visiting a doctor!

ANYONE can buy the sex-enhancing drug Viagra over the World Wide Web.

WASHINGTON — Want to get Viagra, Prozac and other strong, prescription drugs at one-tenth the going price — without even bothering to visit a doctor?

It's easy. Just sign onto the World Wide Web and order them like millions of other Americans.

You can even buy marijuana like the super-potent diet drug Xenical, which have never been approved by the Food Drug Administration.

And surprisingly there's little or nothing that the government can do about it.

"It's very hard to control what happens on the Internet," says FDA spokesman William Hubbard. "The sale of prescription drugs is regulated by individual states. It's conceivable that a company in Ohio could place an ad on the Web offering Prozac for sale and someone in Indiana could order it without Ohio officials even knowing about it.

"And many of the companies offering these drugs are based in other countries. They send their products in plain brown packages, making it very hard for U.S. Customs agents to spot."

Hubbard says he understands why these Internet sites have such appeal for the buyer.

"The customer can buy in private and save up to 90 percent on the drug — and avoid the cost of a doctor visit," he says.

"But there's a very real and serious downside. The drugs you buy on the Web aren't subject to government standards. There could be selling you expired, diluted or worse — drugs with harmful substances in them.

"And even if you get exactly what you order, it can still be dangerous. Most of these drugs have side effects. For instance, certain men may have problems if they take Viagra. Unless you've consulted a physician who knows your specific medical profile, you could be putting yourself at risk."

Hubbard says the FDA is currently urging individual states to join in a cooperative effort to regulate the sale of pharmaceuticals on the Web.

ORANGUTANS IGNORE THEIR YOUNG AFTER WATCHING VIDEOTAPES OF HOW TO BE BETTER PARENTS!

MONKEY — County Humane zoologists got the bright idea of teaching orangutans parenting skills by letting them watch videos of other orangutans caring for their young. But once the apes got a taste for the tube, they started watching tapes all day — and completely ignored their babies!

By KEVIN CREED
Weekly World News

The two orangutans, both orphaned and raised in captivity, had no idea of how to raise their offspring.

Zookeepers were hoping the videos would teach them.

Wrong.

"They got so engrossed in the TV screen they just brushed their baby away to fend for herself," said zoo director Ivan Kornegay. "They wouldn't feed him, wouldn't pee to his needs — in fact they were better parents before they saw the tapes."

The TV and video system have since been removed but the orangutans, Monika and Rolex, still gather around and stare at the space where the monitor used to be.

The baby has been temporarily removed from the pen, but Monika and Rolex don't seem to notice.

LIMA, Peru — Sister Concita Pereira had spent the last 43 years of her life at a secluded convent in the Indian Alps and hadn't laid eyes on a guy in all that time. So when a terrified man ran buck-naked through the garden where she was working, the shocked nun keeled over in her tracks — and died of a heart attack!

Italian says the vessel has been preserved on Mount Ararat in Turkey

AGRI, Turkey — An Italian explorer has found what experts believe is Noah's ark!

The explorer, Angelo Palego, claims that the famed boat rests on the side of Mount Ararat.

Archaeologists say there's little doubt [illegible] the ark that weathered the 40-day flood written of in the Bible. The flood reportedly covered the entire planet, killing things perished except for Noah, his family and a male and female of each species on planet Earth.

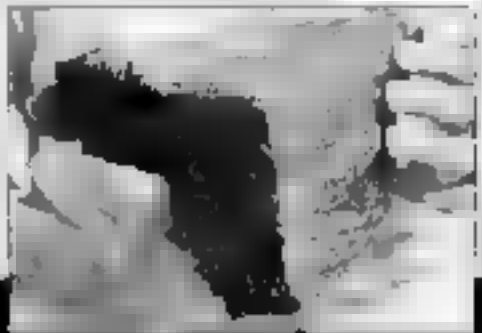
Italian archaeologist Dr. Luigi Morelli says he will publish a full report in the journal Science when the ark is freed from the ice and thoroughly examined.



Experts say this piece of wood is cut from a hand-hewn wooden beam and dates from the time of the flood. It was recovered from Mt. Ararat along with other evidence of the ark.

WASHINGTON — The last living descendant of legendary Sioux Indian Chief Crazy Horse says his great-great-grandfather has repeatedly appeared to him in visions and has warned of horrifying catastrophes to take place between now and March 13, 2000!

Billy Still Waters has been lobbying for a chance to go before the U.S. Senate and address America's leaders -- hoping that they will heed what he calls "the Crazy Horse Prophecies" and take action now, while it is still possible to avert worldwide cataclysm.

Among the chilling events foretold by the Native-American's long-dead ancestor:

- A Second Great Depression far more devastating than the first, with starvation so widespread that "the White Eyes will be forced to eat each others' flesh for meat."
- A new wave of the AIDS epidemic that will spread from person to person like wildfire, taking the lives of "even the most chaste and innocent."
- Terrifying natural disasters, including earthquakes of unprecedented magnitude, unrelenting global drought, colossal tidal waves and raging forest fires that incinerate entire states.

Indian chief — with dire world's future!

BILLY STILL WATERS
Last living descendant of legendary Sioux Indian Chief Crazy Horse than 1 in 1,000 people spared from Hell.

● The destruction of the entire planet in a nuclear Armageddon on March 13, 2000.

Crazy Horse, who helped Sitting Bull defeat Custer at the Battle of the Little Bighorn in 1876, was widely believed by his followers to have psychic powers.

And following his death in 1877, many sightings of his ghost have been reported by visitors to the sacred Black Hills he once defended from the white man.

Great great grandson Billy Still Waters of Pierre, S.D., says the famous relative has been appearing to him ever since he was a young boy.

"Once Crazy Horse told me that the White Eyes would one day walk on the moon. When that really happened a few years later, I understood that he spoke the truth.

"Crazy Horse walks among the spirits now — he exists outside of normal time. He has seen our future and it is very grim indeed."

Crazy Horse has warned his last living descendant that mankind faces a series of horrors, culminating in the annihilation of all life on Earth in March of next year.

"Many of these troubles are our own doing," said Still Waters. "Crazy Horse foresees environmental disasters resulting from pollution and global warming, and nuclear war resulting from ethnic hatred and conflicts between nations."

The Indian chief's spirit told Still Waters that the catastrophes can be avoided or at least minimized if people take his message seriously and make dramatic changes in the way we treat our brothers and sisters the world over — and the planet Earth itself. Back in 1994, Still Waters sought a private audience with President Bill Clinton to convey the urgent warning, but his pleas were rejected — much to his chagrin.

"Crazy Horse has chosen me to deliver his message from the Great Beyond," he said.

"If we listen and act properly, we have a chance. If we ignore his warning, we are doomed. Life will vanish from the Earth in the year 2000 if we don't change our ways now — and, as things stand now, very few of us will go to Heaven.

"That is why I am hoping to be a chance to address Congress soon. Only with the full cooperation of the American government can a tragic end to human history be avoided."

AIDS PLAGUE, END OF THE WORLD,

THE DEVIL'S TRIANGLE IS MISSING!

Scientists are concerned by startling new evidence that the Devil's Triangle has vanished, possibly because of global warming!

They say unexplained disappearances of boats and planes in the mysterious waters off the southeastern coast of the U.S. have dwindled to zero this year — down from 32 just 10 years ago.

"There hasn't been a single documented report of a vanishing this year," says Professor Nicholas Schemp, leader of a German team which has been monitoring activity in the Triangle.

SCIENTISTS PLAN GLOBAL WARMING HAS DESTROYED THE MOST MYSTERIOUS PLACE ON THE PLANET!

Over the years, more than 1,000 people have vanished without a trace in the Triangle. But all that may be in the past, the scientists say. Prof. Schemp believes the Devil's Triangle has been steadily shrinking over the last 25 years. "The number of disappearances plummeted from 154 in 1963 to just 32 in 1988," he observed.

In the past, a bizarre electromagnetic field in the Triangle interfered with navigational instruments, making compasses whirl out of control.

Beginning in 1992, Prof. Schemp's team has taken yearly magnetic readings to map the dimensions of the Triangle.

"We were able to determine that the size of the Triangle was diminishing at a rapid rate," he said. "We measured the total area at half what it was in 1963. By the beginning of next year, it will be gone altogether."

FRIGHTENING PROPHECY

PHASE 1:

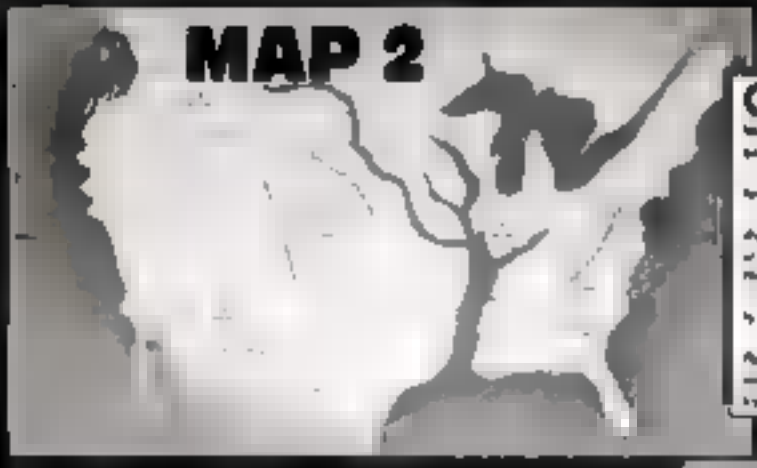
THE GREENHOUSE EFFECT a problem caused largely by pollution, thaws soldiers out of killer

Severe winters occur with temperatures in the Midwest dropping as low as 60 degrees below zero. The middle of the country is also hit by high winds and tornadoes, accompanied by devastating floods that destroy crops and agriculture.

Unusual high tides and global warming cause water levels to rise, submerging coastlines. On the Eastern seaboard, water passes sharply at Long Island and New Jersey and turns Baltimore into a swamp. On the West coast, the Pacific floods the city of Seattle and encroaches on a huge portion of the Oregon coastline.

Two volcanoes, Mt. Rainier and Mt. Baker, suddenly erupt, blanketing the entire Pacific Northwest with ash and causing additional crop failures.

Continuous earthquake activity rocks the area between San Francisco and Los Angeles. In the summers, heat and high winds also pummel southern California, causing expensive crop losses. Much of the water supply becomes severely polluted



PHASE 2:

GLOBAL WARMING causes oceans to rise another 200 feet and leaves Washington state's Olympic Peninsula as a mountainous island

The Great Lakes rise by 100 to 120 feet

Continuing earthquakes reshape California, forming a huge bay on the Pacific with lakes covering the foothills of the Sierra Nevada Mountains

San Francisco and L.A. are completely swallowed by the Pacific Ocean

The landscape and adjacent states flood as do the tributary rivers extending into Montana, North and South Dakota. Widespread earthquake activity helps to carve out a huge bay as Texas slips deeper into the Gulf of Mexico and stretches all the way into Arkansas. Houston is left completely under water

Sections of Pennsylvania and New York have become islands, while Baltimore is now submerged

Everywhere east of the Appalachian Mountains is severely affected by high winds and flooding, with North and South Carolina breaking apart into dozens of small islands.

To make matters worse, a floating glacier washes into the coast of Maine and settles there, bringing bitterly cold

PHASE 3:

THE GLACIER TRANSFORMS the state of Maine into a giant ice-cap. Much of this area becomes uninhabitable.

Adding to the problem is a shift in the Earth's magnetic poles. Among other frightening effects, this produces winds exceeding 900 miles per hour.

Wind and rain continually pull the Eastern seaboard, leaving Philadelphia and New York City couture cities. The new East Coast runs through Pittsburgh.

Rising ocean waters transform Dallas into a seaport city.

Most of California is under water except for what is left of the Sierra Nevada Mountains left as an island.

A horrific earthquake turns Arkansas and the Mississippi River basin into a huge ocean bay.

By now, reduced resources, and all types food and supplies, begin to dwindle for themselves.

"They will establish two governments across the United States each of them claiming the best land

WARNS:

PHASE 4:

CONTINUOUS RAINS put more and more of the Northeast under water, while deep crevices and fjords emerge on the new Pacific coastline, located in Idaho. Hurricane-force winds bombard this new beach area.

Most of California is now submerged, except for a few high places such as Mount Shasta. That location, however, becomes uninhabitable due to volcanic activity.

In New Jersey, underground caverns filled with natural gas explode, creating a terrifying fire storm in the Southwest. The deadly superintense weather land all the way to Texas and Arizona.

As the Moon no moment becomes trapped by Earth's gravity and begins to orbit, making it appear for some time that our planet has two moons. This creates a momentous tidal pull, and a huge amount of water is hauled north through the giant rent which now splits Arizona, bringing the sea all the way up to Savannah, North Dakota.

Lake Erie and Lake Ontario overflow flooding Pennsylvania and turning Pittsburgh into another new Venice.

By now spring and fall no longer exist. "One day it is hot, the next is cold," Mrs. Toye writes.

LIFE AS WE KNOW IT WILL END!

PHASE 5:

THE ASTEROID that has been orbiting Earth finally crashes into the Nevada desert, wreaking havoc.

Meanwhile, Lake Michigan overflows, sending a tidal wave rushing over the Midwest. Many Midwestern towns are flooded with 50 feet of water, making them uninhabitable for decades.

Because of the still-rising Atlantic, the nation's capital has been moved to the state of Colorado.

Many remains covered in glacial ice [illegible] up on the west of America [illegible] sending to Mary Toye. These new states all the East Coast will become a beautiful paradise much like the Garden of Eden [illegible].

"It becomes a new equation [illegible] seasons. Within 600 to 700 years, new plants and animals begin to populate the land, [illegible] that cover much of the Eastern United States.

Flying saucers do NOT come from outer space!

UFOS SENT TO EARTH BY SATAN

. . . FROM THE BOWELS OF HELL, SAYS LEADING EXPERT

By MIKE FOSTER | Weekly World News

So-called "aliens" do not really come from deep space, as commonly believed. They are actually demons sent by Satan from the bowels of Hell!

That is the startling contention of a leading theologian who has studied hundreds of modern reports of UFO abductions as well as accounts of demon attacks dating back to the Middle Ages.

"The similarities are so strong and so plentiful that we must conclude that aliens and demons are one and the same," declared Professor Victor Braunschweig of Dusseldorf, Germany.

Demons, as described by medieval witnesses, are grayish-green in complexion, with pointy ears, cold black eyes and reptilian skin — just like the "aliens" seen by modern-day witnesses. People in olden times often said that demons appeared at their bedsides at night, kidnapped them and forced them to fly among the stars — just as in accounts by UFO abductees.

And "aliens" are notorious for sexually assaulting female captives, just like a demon known as an incubus.

The assaults prove the mysterious beings are demonic, not extraterrestrial, the expert says.

"The idea of space aliens raping Earth women makes no scientific sense whatsoever," observed Prof. Braunschweig.

"Beings who evolved on another planet would have no interest in having sex with a human female — just as an alligator or a spider would have no such desire.

"On the other hand, a demon sent by Satan would be seething with lust and hatred for humans." Space aliens with men, extracting sperm. "That corresponds to a demon known as a succubus, which tempts males," says the expert. "According to legend, a succubus is simply an amateur at another term."

Many female abductees report having been impregnated by their captors.

"This is quite consistent with the reports of medieval demonologists, who wrote of strange beings spawned by the interbreeding of humans and demons," said Prof. Braunschweig.

Newly discovered virus IMPROVES your I.Q.!

Dr. Elmund

ATLANTA, Ga. — Physicians in seven states are reporting the emergence of a little-understood virus that seems to improve victims' intelligence — as much as 100 I.Q. points in some cases!

A spokesman for the Centers For Disease Control says details are sketchy at this time, but here is what is known so far:

- 128 people have been diagnosed with a previously unknown viral disease that affects the brain, heart and nervous system.
- Cases have been reported in Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Maine, New Hampshire, Virginia and Maryland.
- The symptoms are a low fever, a dry cough, sore familiar with the still-unnamed virus say the physical symptoms disappear after a few days but amazingly the improved intelligence appears to be permanent.

Noted immunologist Dr. Thomas Elmund, who has treated one of the cases here in Atlanta, says the change is clear and dramatic.

"One woman, an elderly housewife with no background in languages, learned student who was failing algebra, got the third-highest grade in his class a week after contracting the virus."

While Dr. Elmund believes there is little doubt that patients' intelligence is improved, only 19 of them actually received before-and-after I.Q. tests.

The I.Q. of the tested subjects improved an average of 32 points, and the greatest improvement was 102.

But the small number of cases lead some skeptical researchers to call the evidence "anecdotal."

"I believe a great deal more testing has to be done before we can actually say this virus increases intelligence," said

Perhaps you have wondered why your hair is so fine and brittle? Why it doesn't naturally grow on its own to lengths of 26, 28, even 30 inches – like you've seen on other women?
